

Exploring a Sense of Place

Come to a weekend workshop at beautiful Tunitas Creek Ranch!

Please join us, June 19th-21st, 2009

“How to recover elementary contact with the natural world is the subject and focus of this program.”

-Thomas Berry

Exploring a Sense of Place is a program that gives people an opportunity to do something constructive about today's environmental challenges, while both enriching their own lives and the life of their community.

The Workshop

-Designed for teachers, parents, grandparents, and anyone who wants to learn how to create an Exploring a Sense of Place program of their own

-Learn from experienced, talented guides how to read the landscape of place through its deep time geologic story, weather and climate, plant and animal communities, and ways of the indigenous people, and learn how to apply these learnings within their own bioregions.

-At the end of the weekend, participants will have the tools, support, models, and inspiration needed to develop similar programs for reconnection in their own communities.

-Graduate credits available through the University of San Diego.

Limited to 20 participants - Register now!

-The weekend workshop costs $475 per person, and partner/family and membership discounts are available.

-The price includes all of the weekend's activities and guides, camping, meals, and the guidebook, Exploring a Sense of Place.

-To register, or to get more information, please contact Laurel Smith at lsmith@exploringsenseofplace.org or (650)938-9300 ext. 16.

Exploring a Sense of Place